Scooby and Shaggy's wild ride came to an end inside the gates of a monastery. Professor Jeffries, an archaeologist searching for the lost city of Shangri-La, and his Nepalese mountain guide, Pemba, found them.

"Are you alright?" asked Professor Jeffries.

"Yeah, but the rest of the gang must be worried sick about us," cried Shaggy.

Pemba agreed to take Scooby and Shaggy to the weather station. "You can call your friends from there," he said.

"I'll come, too," added the Professor. "It's dangerous out there with the snow creature."

"Row reature?" yelped Scooby-Doo. "Rikes!"

The Professor told them about the Abominable Snowman, also known as the Yeti.

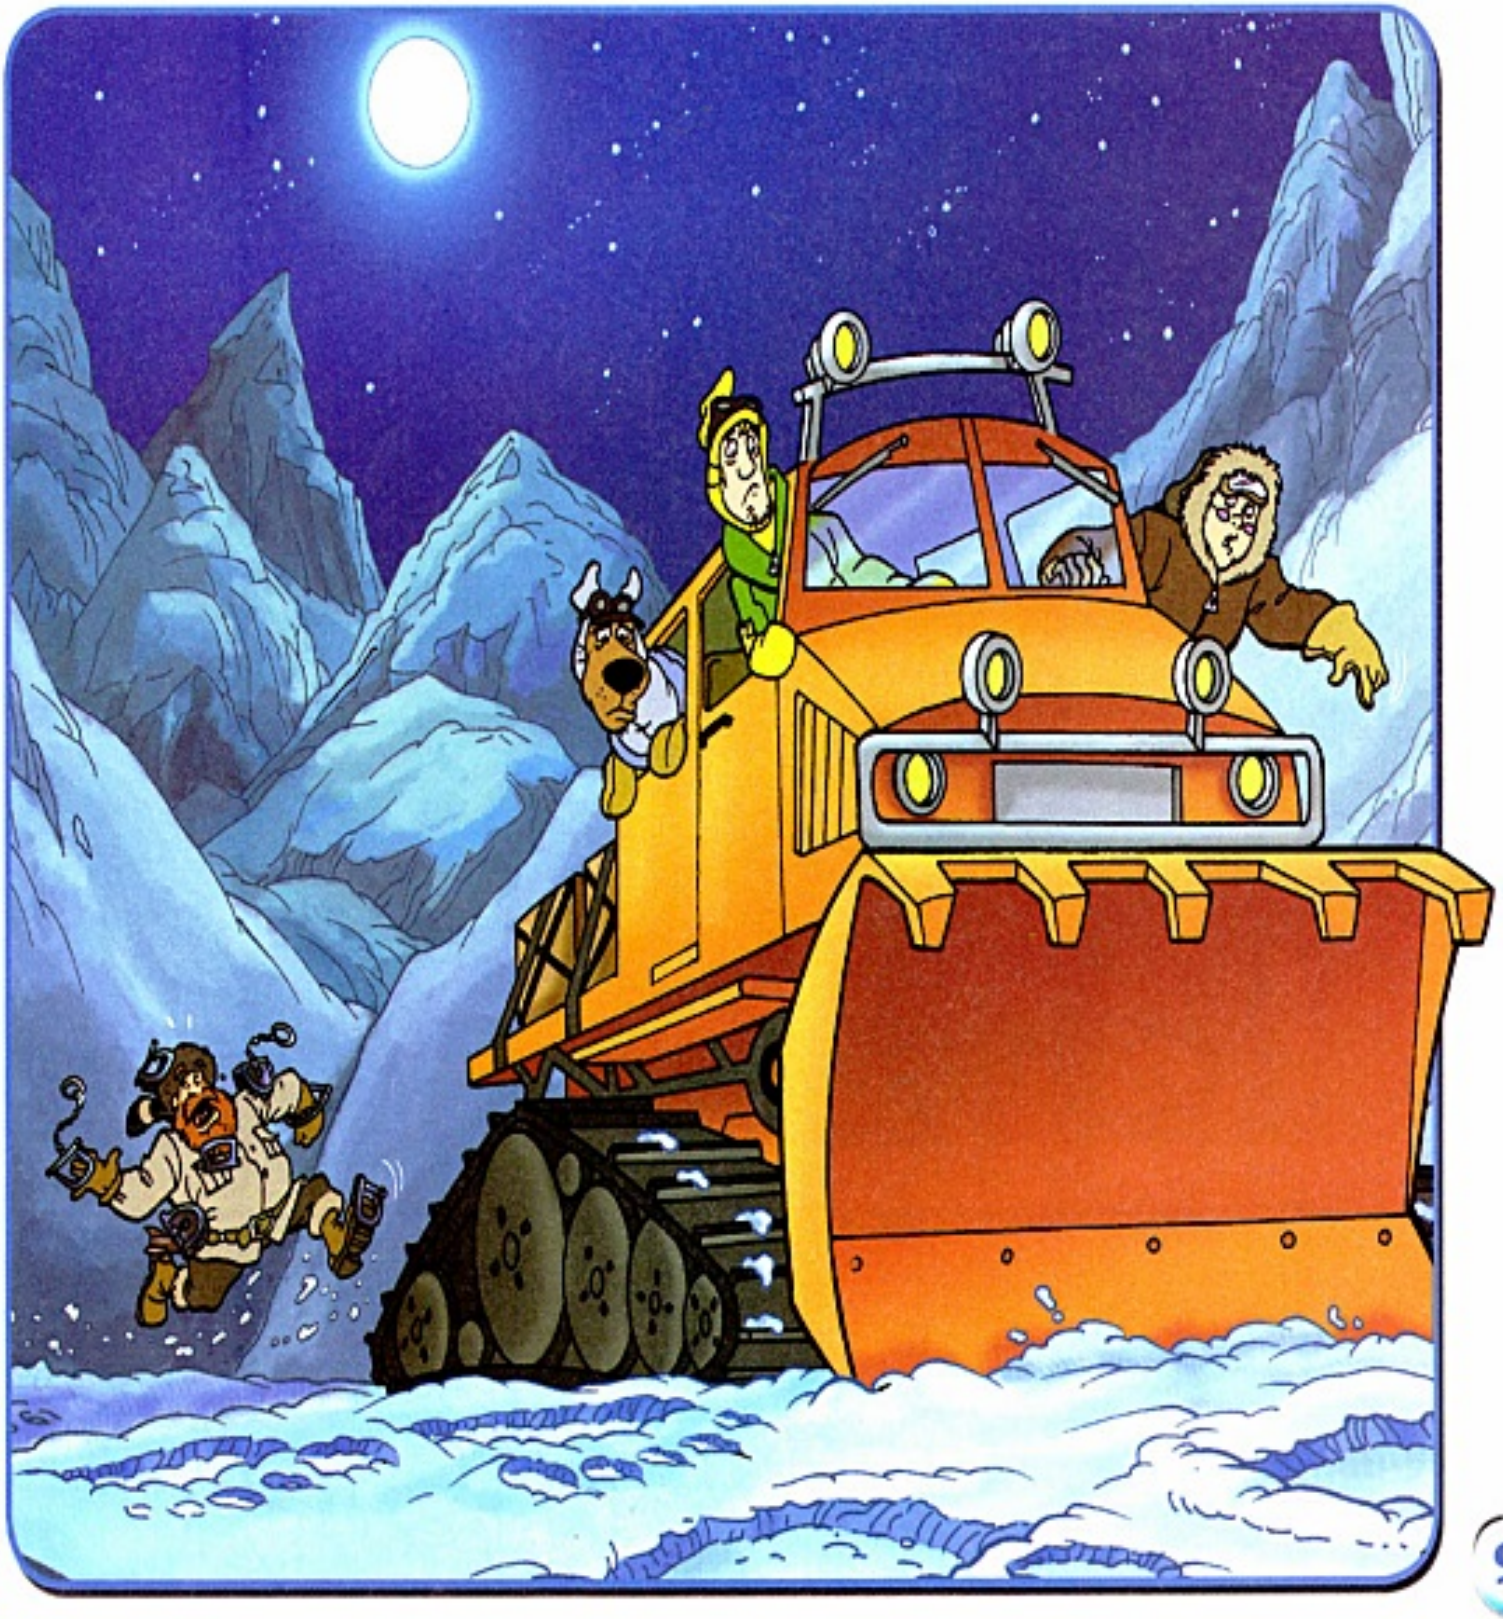
Scooby and Shaggy narrowly escaped the Yeti's clutches thanks to the sudden appearance of their old friend, Radio DJ Del Chillman. "I came here months ago to see the monster," said Del, "and I was tired of waiting for him to show up. And now that I'm planning to leave the Himalayas, the Yeti's tracks are everywhere!"



Safely back at the Weather Station where Del was broadcasting from, Shaggy found a strange letter. "Like, Hmm . . . I wonder who wrote this strange letter?" he asked Scooby-Doo.

"You two stay here and take over the radio broadcast while I go search for your friends," instructed Del.

Soon, Fred, Daphne, and Velma arr

"There's something strange about these tracks," pondered Velma. "The creature must be huge, but his footprints barely sink into the snow!"
Suddenly, Fred saw Pemba in a monster trap, and quickly freed him.
"This is my sister Minga's radio!" exclaimed Pemba, "She listens to Del Chillman wherever she goes!"

Unfortunately, the Abominable Snowman listened to the radio too! That's how he found Shaggy and Scooby! After tearing through the Weather Station, the monster chased them up the radio tower.

"You think you can outsmart me, eh beastie?" asked LaFleur, as he threw a net over the Yeti.

Velma, Fred, and Del arrived at the Weather Station moments after Scooby and Shaggy floated away.

"According to these inventory records, a few helium tanks are missing," said Velma.

"Take a look at this!" interrupted Del. "This seismograph is picking up some strange vibrations deep inside the mountain!"

"Let's split up to look for clues in the mountain," said Fred.

Scooby and Shaggy dropped from the weather balloon and landed in a secret burial ground.

"Welcome to the lost kingdom of Shangri-La," said the High Lama. "Years ago, men driven by greed came here to seek riches, and our paradise was lost."

"Like, that must be why the snowman has such a chilly personality!" said Shaggy. "He's just trying to protect this place."

The tunnel in the Yeti's cave led to a crystal cavern. That's where Daphne and Pemba found Del and the rest of the gang. "It's Professor Jeffries!" cried Pemba. "He's trying to steal the sacred crystals!"

KABOOM! Professor Jeffries's blasts loosened the crystals from the cave walls.

"Come on gang!" said Fred. "I've got a plan to catch this crystal craving creep."

While the Professor wasn't looking, Scooby and Shaggy stole his special crystal.

"It all makes sense!" cried Velma. "Professor Jeffries used the legend of the Yeti to scare us away from the mountain so he could steal the . . . "

Now that their icy adventure was over, the gang could finally enjoy their vacation!

"Paris is for lovers, right Scoob?" asked Shaggy. "Well I'm in love with this springtime spread!"

Shaggy's cell phone rang. "Like, hello?" he answered.

"Uh, guys?" said Fred. "I think I got on the wrong plane!"

"Like, next stop, the Amazon Jungle!" cried Shaggy.
